Defining Leadership Succession

Largely defined by the organization practicing it, Leadership Succession is the planned practice of identifying future leaders, be it business unit leaders or C-suite key leaders, within an organization.

Leadership Succession Strategy:

Identifying → Developing → Placement

Risks When No Strategy Exists

Andersen, D. (Producer), Lasseter, J. (Director) & Stanton, D. (Director). (1998). A Bug's Life [Motion picture]. USA: Pixar Animation Studios.

1. Business Continuity
2. Unnecessary and unplanned costs of hiring, training, and loss of revenue in the meantime. *(To the tune of $112 Billion!)
3. Disengagement from current employees; potential to lose star employees who don't see a career path

*Large companies that underwent forced successions in recent years would have generated, on average, an estimated US$112 billion more in market value in the year before and the year after their turnover if their CEO succession had been the result of planning. – Strategy+Business Newsletter, a PwC business

Leadership Succession Tool: The 9-Box

Pros & Cons of the 9-Box

Pros

- Ease of Use
- Logical Approach
- Inexpensive Tool

Cons

- Can be “open to interpretation”
- Potential for Large Subjectivity and Bias
- “Plotting, then Justifying”
- Manual Methods = Tedious and Lengthy Process

Tips & Best Practices

Evaluating someone's future potential is difficult, so help your managers and key leaders by providing a set of clearly defined competencies and a measurement scale.

*Low Leadership Potential: The individual is operating at maximum potential (there is little to no room for growth or improvement). The individual is well placed in his or her current role.

Medium Leadership Potential: With additional training and/or mentorship, the individual is likely to grow in his or her leadership potential. The individual shows promise for future leadership positions, but is not ready now for managerial promotion.

High Leadership Potential: The individual is currently operating at a high leadership capacity, leading self and others well, is a great team player, and shows promise for continued growth. The individual is ready now or in the near future for managerial promotion.

Tips & Best Practices: Case Study

- “Alliandify it” – Lessons from Amanda Kopetsky, Director of Corporate Human Resources
 - Identify Organization Overall Goals and Needed Competencies
- “Talent is every leader’s job, not just HR.”
- Give yourself time, resources, and flexibility.

Reduce Bias and Subjectivity

Incorporate a solid, calibrated performance review process first.

Reference our webinar through HR.com from January 2021 on Improving Consistency & Decreasing Rater Bias in Performance Reviews*

1. It starts with well-defined, aligned goals.

(Hint: Utilize Performance Culture's Goal Management Tool for ease).

2. It continues with training your managers how to truly coach and provide feedback AND how to apply your rating methodology.

(Hint: It's not the rating scale's fault).

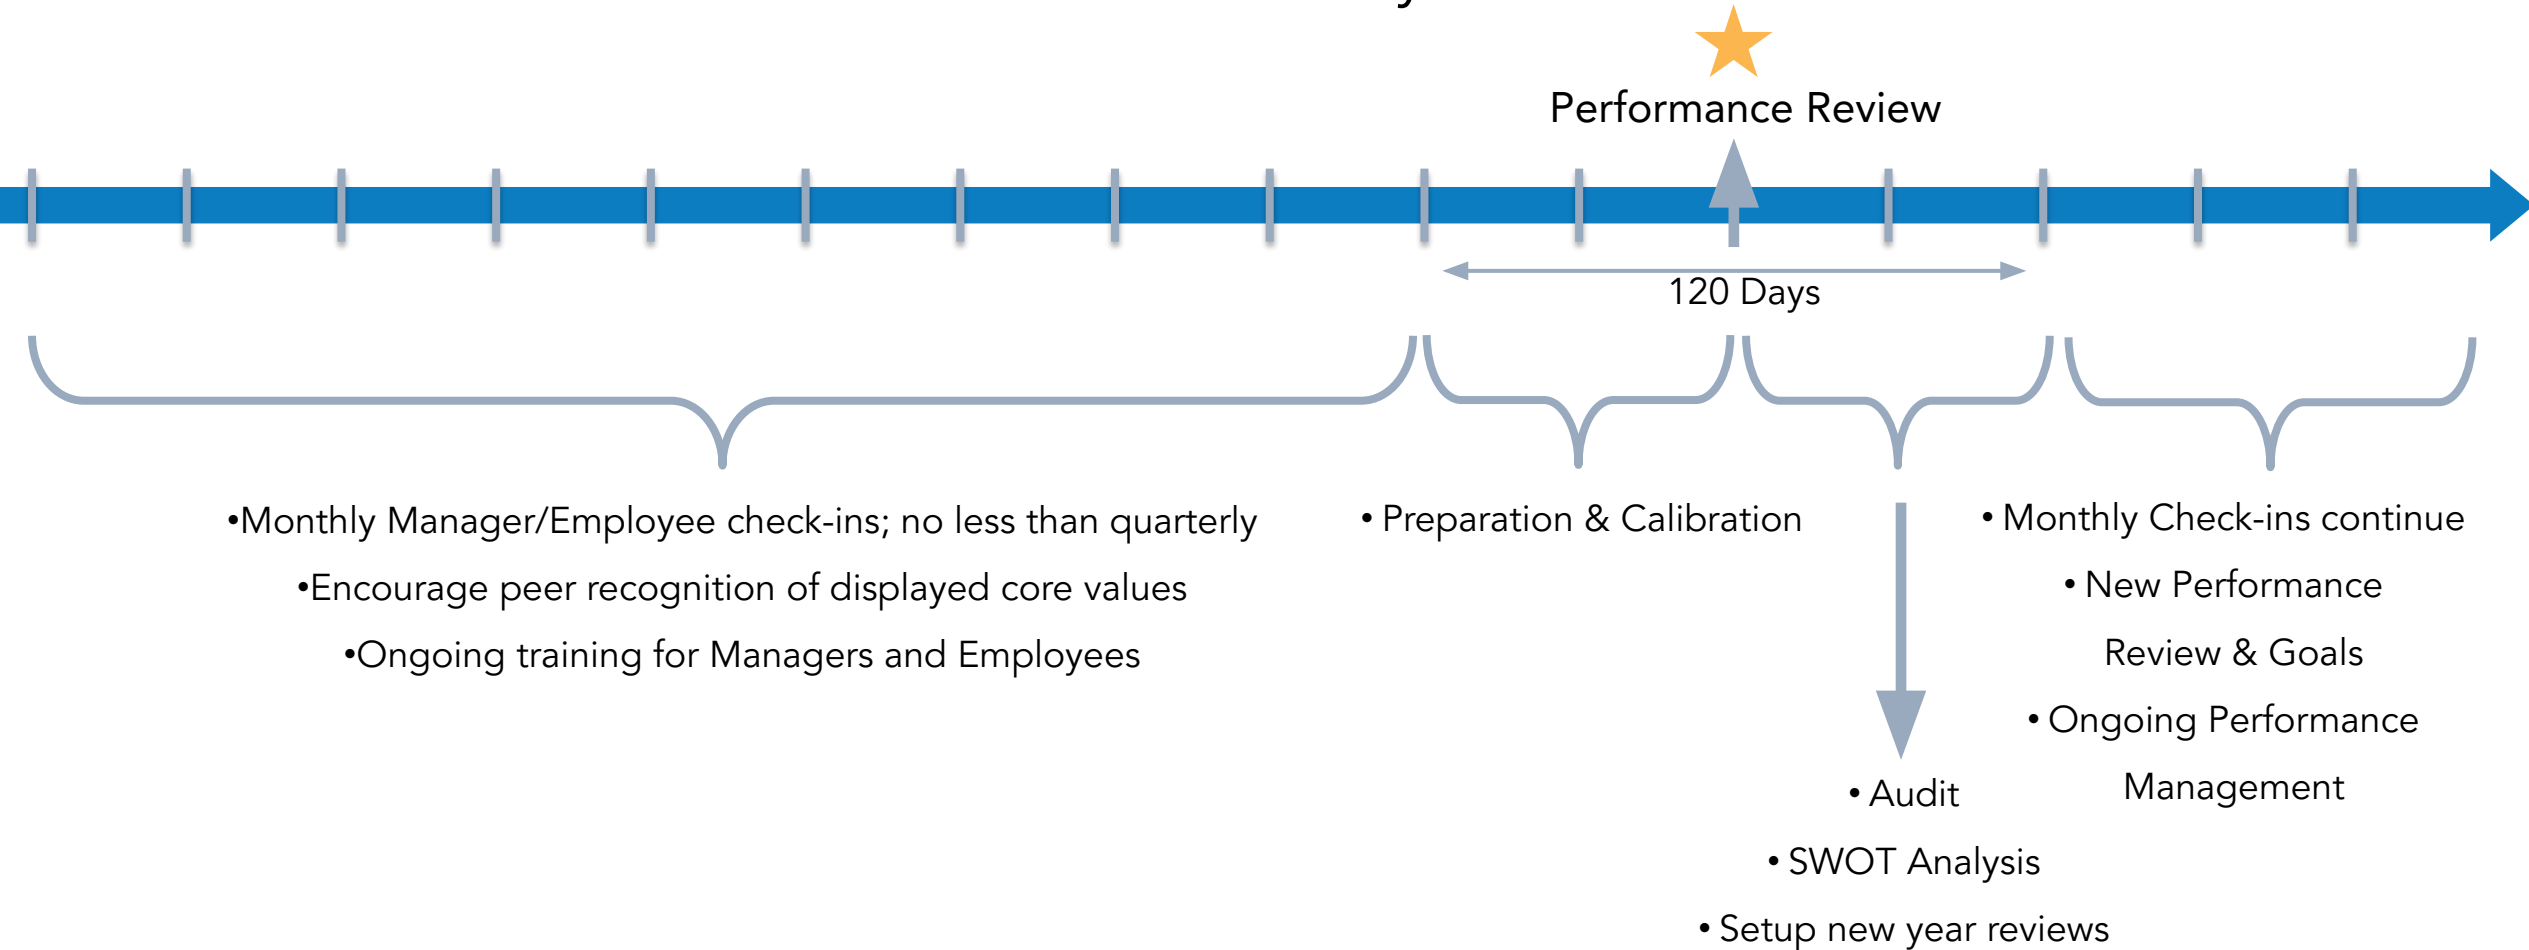

3. It concludes with leading your organization through data-driven decisions.

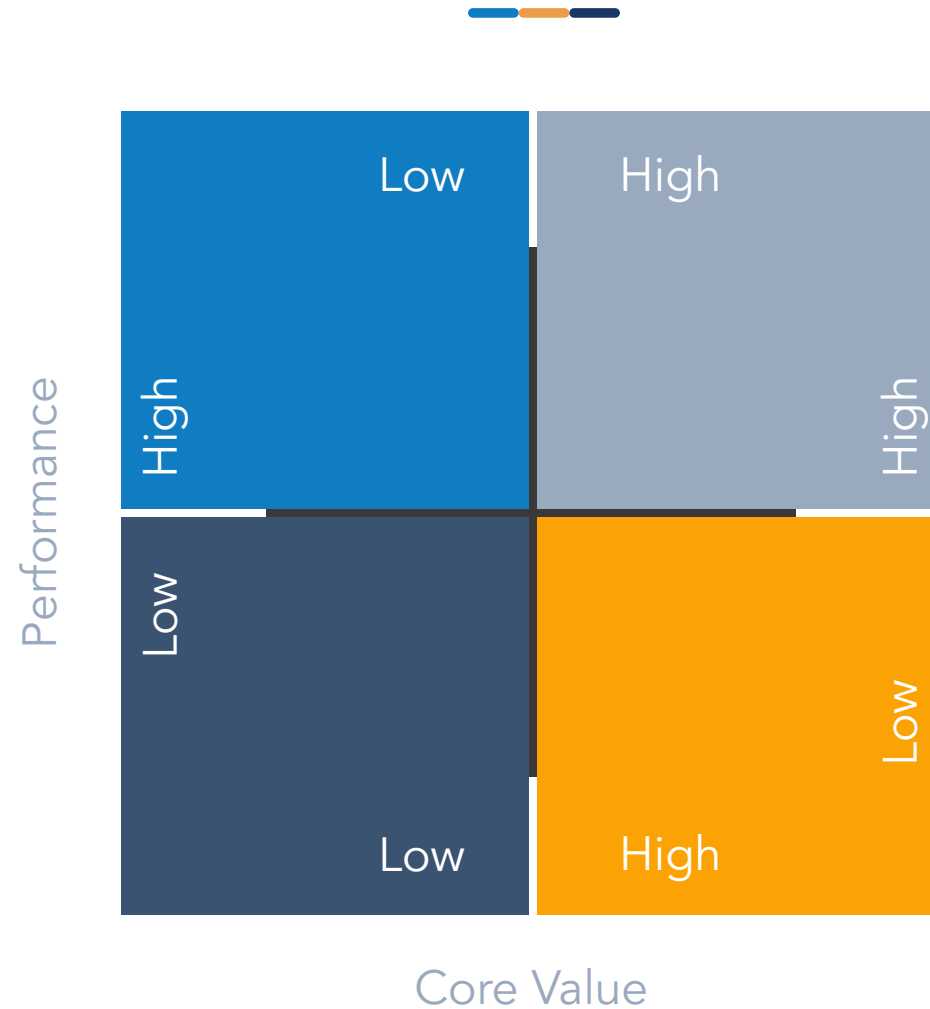

Step 3 is possible when you have proper goals and behavior competencies defined for each business unit and preferably role, plus a well-calibrated process!

How the PVM Can Help

Exporting the Star and High Potential Employees, based on scored data, allows Managers to focus on true candidates for succession and complete the 9-box faster.

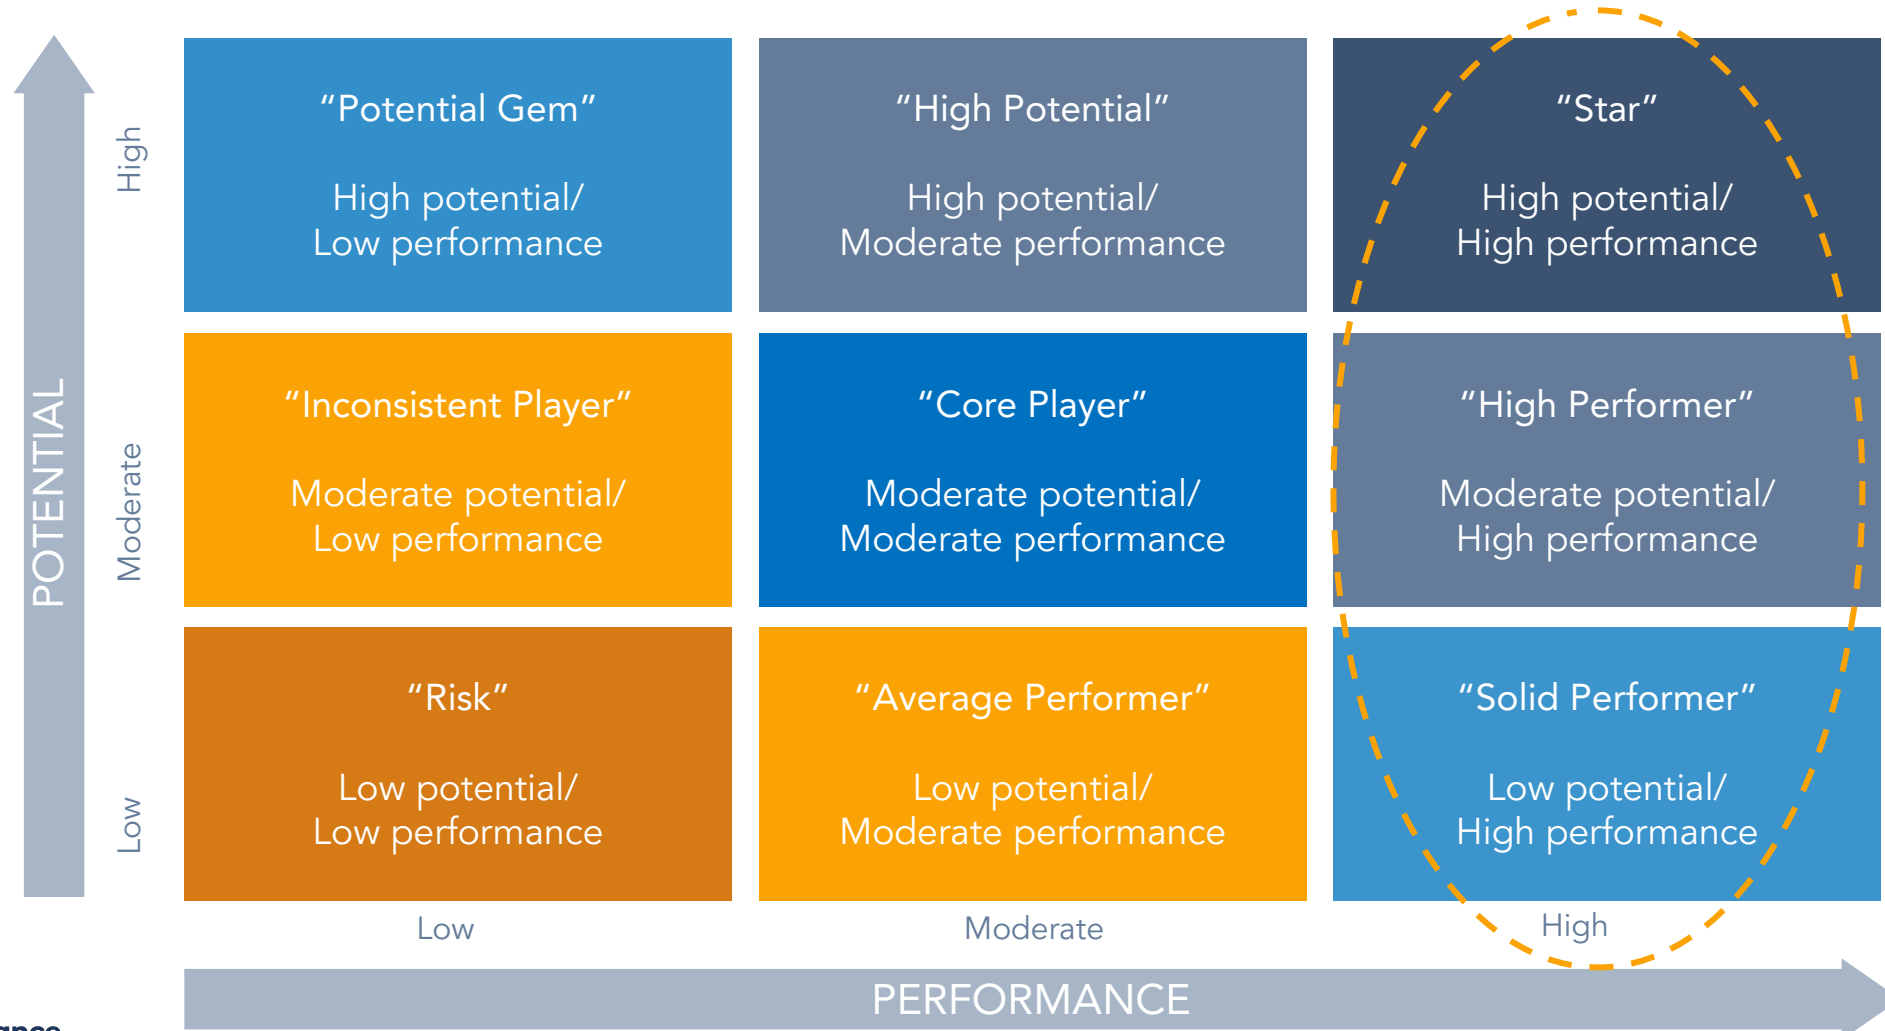

The PVM Management Model forces Managers to evaluate candidates on individual job and behavioral competencies.

Over time, historical data provides trend analysis and more objectivity (proof) for 9-Box placements.

Real Life Application: Justify, then Plot

The screenshot displays a performance review for Allison Meyers for the period 2021-2021. The interface includes a navigation bar with tabs for Objectives, Goals, Competencies, Development, Satisfaction, Summary, and Approval. The 'Goals' tab is active, showing two goals with associated notes and ratings.

Goal 1: Average 150 to 200 new prospects per month (Weight: 25%)

Employee Notes: I have consistently averaged between 175 and 200 new prospects a month, thanks to the partnerships we have built with a couple high profile media outlets. The months in Q3 all averaged higher than 200 new prospects, and I was able to maintain that momentum into Q4. This increase in the second half of the year also led to a higher rate of qualifying calls.

Coaching Notes: Wow, I am continually impressed at the pace your team is keeping while expanding our reach. The increase in Q3 and Q4 were especially impressive, but I want to make sure your team feels supported to keep up that pace. Let's all meet to talk about importance and urgency and where to focus your efforts first, with this increased prospect list.

Goal 2: Complete 30+ qualifying calls per week for a min of 300 per quarter (Weight: 25%)

Employee Notes: I consistently complete more than 30 qualifying calls per week, and saw a much higher rate in the second half of the year, with the increase in our number of prospects. I feel the quality of my calls increased throughout the year as well, as I honed in my high level pitch for our product.

I Feel the Need...the Need for Speed!

We've decreased bias, increased objectivity, and even increased some speed in the 9-Box process with the Performance-Values Matrix, but...it's still a manual process that can be PAINFUL!!! (Especially for HR!)

Performance

You can use the existing score from the year end performance review if there was a score available although that may not be the case for all. Therefore standard criteria should be used for determining your assessment recommendation. Following are suggestions to consider in determining the performance rating.

Potential

Ultimate potential level is the job level the individual is capable of attaining, provided continued performance and development under the best possible conditions. A high potential has characteristics that go beyond high performance. Consider raw ability, motivation to succeed, and commitment to the organization.

Takeaways

1. Leadership Succession is not a “nice to have” but a “got to have.”

2. Multiple methods and tools available.
The 9-box model is the most common.

3. Minimize cons and maximize pros of the 9-box with best practices and the Performance-Values Matrix.
